He dined with Marshal Dockery at the hotel, and they were there to supper to-night, to all appearances as two congenial fellows, the marshal declaring that he can't conceive of his being his prisoner. Editor Daniels even spent a while at his desk in the News and Observer, the marshal the while hard by.

The hearing and sentence of Editor Daniels is affording the State capital the sensation experienced in a great while, and the outcome is awaited with the most intense interest.

THE ANSWER.

The answer submitted by counsel for Mr. Daniels sets out that the publication is not libelous, and did not tend to impair the respect due to the authority of the court. the court, That as editor-in-chief of the news-

That as editor-in-chief of the newspaper he conceives it to be his duty to freely and fearlessly discuss all matters of a public nature which concern the people of the State of North Carolina, and that the articles were conceived, prepared and published by him in order that the people of the State might be informed concerning a matter in which they were vitally interested. He admits that his purpose was to express his disapprobation of the appointment by Judge Purnell of V. E. McBee as receiver of the Atlantic and North Carolina Rail-Judge Purnell of V. E. McBee as receiver of the Atlantic and North Carolina Rali-road, when the judge was outside of North Carolina, and without any notice to the railroad company of his action, and likewise the issuing of a second order in the proceeding, as set out in the articles, and the appointment of a receiver at all, when this respondent had been advised by many attorneys that such course could not be legally taken; he disavowed, in writing and publishing articles, any intention of committing a contempt of the court, or to impair the respect due to its authority; but, on the contempt of the court, or to impair the respect due to its authority; but, on the contrary, avows that his sole motive was as a public journalist to call the matters and things set out in the articles to the attention of the people of North Carolina.

DENIALS.

DENIALS.

He denies that the publication was in the presence of the court or so near thereto that it was calculated and intended to bring the court into disrepute and destroy the confidence of the people in its decrees, orders and judgments or destroy its usefulness. He denies that the articles tended to obstruct the administration of justice. As to the allegation in respect to further publications, the answer set out that he has no knowledge as to what publications are referred to, and therefore is unable to make answer thereto.

It is set out that the articles were not published during the sitting of court, but after it had adjourned, and that this case had at the time of publication been passed upon by the court and receiver appointed, and the comments of the respondent related to a matter aiready passed upon.

The answer further alleged that the state of the answer further alleged that the situations to the property, of which the source of a passed upon by the court and receiver appointed v. E. McBee or raised surface to resective of the Atlantic and North Carolina Railroad.

Who is Mr. M. Bee? He is the man who was bound a stockholder of the said road.

Therefore he prayed to be discharged.

The Proceedings.

The Proceedings.

The rule for contempt against Mr. Danio's was called for hearing by Judge Purnell in the Federal Court this morning. The court room was packed and Jammed with people, and the most intense interest prevailed. Counsel for Daniels are R. T. Gray, ex_Judge W. R. Winston, Durham; F. A. Woodard, Wilson; ex_Judge T. B. Womack, J. N. Holding, Walter L. Watson and Busbee and Busbee, Raleigh.

Judge Furnell called for the answer to the rule, and Daniels's counsel asked for time, stading that it was a matter of so much inflortance that several drys ought to be allowed for the preparation of a defense. "Request retased," replied the judge. "There is rut one answer; ho must either justify his course of admit the charges in the rule. He has accentuated the matter in the morning's issue of his paper, and I don't propose to allow him a field day in this matter."

Mr. Gray, of Daniels's counsel, insisted that there ought to be time for a complete answer, for the reason, especially, that the judge might review the whole situation. If called now, judgment might be passed in the light of some certain publications and not in the light of the whole defense, to the great injustice of Editor Daniels.

To this the judge asked: "Do you mean to intimate, Mr. Gray, that the court will take an unfair advantage?" "Not at all," replied Mr. Gray.

Judge Winston explained to the judge that they inght complete their answer in two hours.

So the hearing was postponed until 12 o'clock.

The Answer.

When the case was taken up again at noon the answer on the part of Editor Daniels was read, setting out that the court had no jurisdiction to punish in court had no jurisdiction to punish in such a case, power to punish newspapers for contempt on the strength of publica-tions having been taken from the Ctr-cuit Courts by act of Congress in 1831; that it was the intention of the editor to freely and fairly discuss public matters so that the people may be informed; it disclaimed any intention of committing any contemps or intenference with indedisclaimed any intention of committing any contempt or interference with judgments of the court; that the publication was not made during a sitting of the court, and this put it out of the jurisdiction of the judge.

not been a case of the kind since 1831.

He made a plea for the freedom of the press as a bulwark of liberty, and appealed to the judge to dismiss the case for want of jurisdiction, and because Editor Danlels had disclaimed any intention of committing any contempt.

JUDGE PURNELL'S DECISION.

Judge Purnell held he had jurisdiction under section 1725. That he had no intention to muzzle the press, but counted it a sacred bulwark of liberty. He invited free criticism of judicial acts, but they Editorial Extracts.

Here are some editorial extracts from the News and Observer of this morning that Judge Purnell had reference to when he declared during the preliminary hearing this morning that the contempt had been accentuated by publication in to-day's

Issue:

This paper has not been guilty of contempt, unless it is contempt to fairly and fearlessy criticise the public act of a public official. It has that constitutional right, and it cannot fail to exercise it without being untrue to its high mission. It recognizer no "divine right" of judges, but believes their acts are made mistakes and denied to owners of property the right to control it, of what value is a press in this free country?

Judge Purnell took the Atlantic and North Carolina Railroad out of the hands of the present management because of some expenses deemed unwise, and because President Bryan bought some wood from he cover farm the.
